FREE 2016 Energy Code Training

This hands-on course is designed to provide architects with the knowledge and skills needed to navigate key nonresidential 2016 Title 24, Part 6 building standards and compliance options for new construction, alterations and additions, and compliance related documents.

Participants will receive instruction on integrating code compliance tasks into their project schedule, collaborating with the project team to increase energy efficiency, and improving energy literacy to design aesthetically beautiful buildings that use less energy.

Join us for this course to:

- Navigate a compliance process map from project inception to completion of construction
- Identify requirements for nonresidential new construction, additions and alterations for project applicability
- Identify the primary compliance forms and related documents
- Apply the standards to example scenarios
